Now I think I near you saying, As you read this eaption o'er, Western Woman, better study Something that concerns her more.

"Let her mend her husband's stockings, "Wash and starch his Sunday shirt, "Feed her chickens, weed her garden, "Keep her kitchen free from dirt.

"Then if she has time to scribble-" Stop-say nothing more of time; Tis not lack of occupation Makes me try my hand at rhyme.

I have work enough for seven, House and garden both in charge Then the field, it must be guarded Colts and cattle run at large

Think of raising corn and cab bage, Turnips, pumpkins, oats and wheat, Where the cattle run at pleasure Trampling all beneath there feet Pawing up the young potatoes,

While the horses roll the grain,

'Tis enough to rouse ones temper; Tell me, who would not complain. Husband gone from home on business

Leaving me with home in charge; Neighbors knowing law protects them Let their cattle run at large. Think of driving twenty horses

Coming back find fifty cattle On the wheat and boun to stay. Only get them fairly started When the baby wakes and cries,

Have to quit and take my darling,

O'er the hill a mile away;

Bless her little bright black eyes. Ah, she has a magic power, And I think she's half aware That her pleasant tearfull welcome For the moment drives dull care.

But I've really left my subject, Baby threw me off the track, Eu I'll call my thoughts a moment, Only for a moment back.

There have been some changes in the toilet administration this spring, and bonnets-those marvels of the milliner's art have shrunk to such a degree that the Queen of Liliput would have some trouble in trying one on her head. Yet the modistes have endeavored to effect a compromise by making the trimming of one of those " fearfully and wonderfully made" articles as extensive as possible The back of the head and the neck are the time honored cape, and a coronet bridges the bump of benevolence in front of the bonnet. The function may be consider the General Grant of bonnets in point of popularity, and poor Marie Antoinette, whose head sat so uneasily on her shoulders during the dark days of the san culottes, untill it fell at last a victim to their fury has now a namesake nestling amid the curls of our most distinguished belies. In the matter of cloaks the modistes deserve a unanimous vote of thanks for the handsome styles they have brought out this spring. Last year a lady carried on her back a bushel load of jet and beads, which had a disagreeable habit of fastening themselves in everything and the cloaks looked for the world like propositions in Euclid worked out in silk and passementeri. Now the ladies have charming little sacks, basquines and paletots, with surplice or mantilla fronts, lapels like those on a gentleman's frock coat trimming of silk satin and lace, and a coquettish sash tied behind. Since the spring weather our thoroughfares have again become fit for pedestrians, Broadway and Fifth avenue are constantly dotted with those exquisite cloaks, and the ends of the sashes flutter in the May breeze like flags and streamers on the shipping on a national festival .- N.
